

A vacation to cherish – Goa

Last month I went on a solo trip to Goa, it was a kind of trip that was unforgettable for me as it was So, I decided to board an early morning flight from Mumbai airport and I landed in Goa after an hour or so and then I boarded a cab which dropped me at my stay Red Fox, Morjim. I chose North Goa over South Goa because it is usually a lesser busy side of Goa. The first day, I visited large number of beaches in North Goa like Chapora, Anjuna and Arpora. I was quite fortunate enough to view a mesmerising vermillion sunset at the Morjim beach which was quite riveting rendezvous for me. The next day, I visited the well – known Basilica of Bom Jesus which is a remarkable church that displays the grandeur of baroque architecture. The simplistic interiors were enthralling as well. Later that day, I went out to Thalassa – a very well-known party place which had great ‘house mix’ music playing and I made friends with many too. The experience was ineffable, it was no doubt adorable it was like a fun and frolic journey towards the spiritual self – discovery.
